Presentation:

A panel of experts in the disciplines of health and mental health has been assembled to join the Commissioners in an in-depth discussion on mental health care and new delivery systems.

Background:

The four panel members will participate in a discussion that will inform the Commission on new methods of providing mental health access with an integrated perspective. The accumulated wisdom of the participants will be used to challenge existing models and to foster “outside-the-box” concepts to better understand how behavioral health, physical health and substance abuse can be merged to diminish silo-centric principles that were once embedded in medical models and that have contributed towards higher costs. Some of the key delivery elements will include discussions on the continuum of care in mental health, chemical dependency, mental health costs and delivery, and hybrid insurer models. The following six areas will be entertained:

1. Maintaining integrity of behavioral health	2. Balancing resources between system segments
3. Knowledge transfer	4. Outcomes development
5. Data integration	6. Community roles in transformation
